INTRODUCTION

Pursuant to this Court’s order of May 22, 2009, plaintiffs submit this memorandum discussing “whether it would now be appropriate and/or feasible for plaintiffs to file a motion for summary judgment on their claim under 50 U.S.C. § 1810,” with plaintiffs addressing that point “under two scenarios” – with or without “a protective order in place allowing plaintiffs’ counsel access to the Sealed Document.” Dkt. #90 at 4.

In the parties’ Joint Submission of May 15, 2009, Dkt. #89 at 36, plaintiffs posited three options available to this Court for moving this case forward: (1) the Court proceeds with the litigation of plaintiffs’ Article III standing – that is, the fact of plaintiffs’ warrantless electronic surveillance – under plaintiffs’ proposed protective order, with modifications to the proposed order as the Court deems appropriate; (2) the Court forthwith determines plaintiffs’ Article III standing in consideration of plaintiffs’ previous arguments on how the evidence demonstrates plaintiffs’ Article III standing, or (3) the Court renders a default judgment of liability because of defendants’ persistent refusals to comply with the Court’s prior orders.

Plaintiffs understand this Court’s order of May 22, 2009 to have a twofold purpose: (1) to enable the Court’s pursuit of the third option – a default judgment of liability as a discovery sanction under Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(ii) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure – should the Court wish to choose that option, through the Court’s issuance of an order to show cause; and (2) to solicit further briefing by plaintiffs on the first two options – litigation of standing under a protective order, or an adjudication of standing forthwith on the existing record – through the Court’s request that plaintiffs submit a memorandum addressing the appropriateness and/or feasibility of summary judgment proceedings either with or without a protective order allowing plaintiffs’ counsel access to the Sealed Document.

This memorandum addresses the appropriateness and feasibility of summary judgment proceedings – with and without a protective order and access to the Sealed Document – within the context of the first two options plaintiffs posited in the Joint Submission of May 15, 2009. The memorandum also states plaintiffs’ preference among the options available to this Court: that the Court adjudicate Article III standing forthwith on the existing record and rule on whether plaintiffs

1 were subjected to warrantless electronic surveillance within the meaning of the Foreign 2 Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA), without the need for a protective order or access to the 3 Sealed Document, followed by a summary judgment on liability.

4 DISCUSSION

5 I. FIRST SCENARIO: ADJUDICATION OF ARTICLE III STANDING UNDER A 6 PROTECTIVE ORDER AFFORDING ACCESS TO THE SEALED DOCUMENT, 7 FOLLOWED BY SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON LIABILITY.

8 Under the first scenario – with a protective order allowing plaintiffs’ counsel access to the 9 Sealed Document – plaintiffs propose to file a motion for partial summary judgment pursuant to 10 Rule 56(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure (summary judgment “may be rendered on the 11 issue of liability alone”), seeking summary determination of two matters: plaintiffs’ Article III 12 standing arising from their warrantless electronic surveillance, and defendants’ liability.

13 In this scenario, the Court will first adjudicate Article III standing, deciding any contested
14 factual issues after holding an evidentiary hearing. See, e.g., Bischoff v. Osceola County, Fla., 222 15 F.3d 874, 878-80 (11th Cir. 2000). Under a protective order, plaintiffs’ counsel who have been 16 granted favorable security clearance eligibility determinations will be given access to the Sealed 17 Document and the government’s classified filings in this case as the Court deems essential to due 18 process. Briefing, as well as an evidentiary hearing if necessary to decide contested factual issues, 19 will then proceed under secure conditions as prescribed by the protective order.

20 If the Court finds the existence of the factual elements essential to Article III standing – that 21 plaintiffs were subjected to warrantless electronic surveillance within the meaning of FISA – the 22 Court will then proceed to summarily determine liability by deciding purely legal issues, including 23 (1) whether the President has inherent power to disregard an Act of Congress such as FISA in the 24 name of national security, and (2) whether FISA is trumped by the Authorization for Use of 25 Military Force Against Terrorists issued by Congress on September 18, 2001.

26 Plaintiffs believe this procedure is both appropriate and feasible – appropriate because the 27 liability issues are purely legal and thus are amenable to adjudication by partial summary judgment, 28 and feasible because the protective order will prevent any risk to national security as standing is litigated.

1 Plaintiffs are prepared to file such a motion within 30 days after plaintiffs’ counsel have 2 reviewed the Sealed Document and classified filings under the protective order.

3 II. SECOND SCENARIO: ADJUDICATION OF ARTICLE III STANDING
4 WITHOUT A PROTECTIVE ORDER AFFORDING ACCESS TO THE SEALED
5 DOCUMENT, FOLLOWED BY SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON LIABILITY.

6 Under the second scenario – without a protective order allowing plaintiffs’ counsel access 7 to the Sealed Document – plaintiffs again propose to file a motion for partial summary judgment 8 pursuant to Rule 56(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, seeking summary determination of 9 Article III standing and liability. In this scenario, however, the Court will not admit any further 10 evidence introduced by any of the parties on the issue of standing, but will simply proceed 11 forthwith to adjudicate plaintiffs’ Article III standing and rule on whether plaintiffs were subjected 12 to warrantless electronic surveillance within the meaning of FISA. If the Court finds the facts
13 essential to standing, the Court will then proceed to summarily determine liability as set forth 14 above under the first scenario.

15 In plaintiffs’ view, the facts essential to plaintiffs’ Article III standing – warrantless
16 electronic surveillance within the meaning of FISA – are demonstrated not only by the Sealed 17 Document, which this Court has now reviewed, but also by the evidence that plaintiffs have 18 submitted to the Court in connection with their first amended complaint.<sup>1/</sup> Plaintiffs have 19 presented argument to the Court as to how the evidence demonstrates their standing.<sup>2/</sup> Now that

20 <sup>1/</sup> This evidence is set forth in the following court filings: First Amended Complaint, Dkt. #35
21 at 2-12; plaintiffs’ Motion Pursuant To 50 U.S.C. § 1806(f) To Discover Or Obtain Material Relating 22 To Electronic Surveillance, Dkt. #46 at 2-9; and the Declarations of Jon B. Eisenberg, Wendell 23 Belew and Asim Ghafoor In Support Of Motion Pursuant To 50 U.S.C. § 1806(f) To Discover Or 24 Obtain Material Relating To Electronic Surveillance, Dkt. #46. (Court-document page-number

26 <sup>2/</sup> Plaintiffs’ arguments are set forth in the following court filings: plaintiffs’ Motion Pursuant 27 To 50 U.S.C. § 1806(f) To Discover Or Obtain Material Relating To Electronic Surveillance, Dkt.
28 #46 at 16-19; plaintiffs’ Reply To Defendants’ Opposition To Motion Pursuant To 50 U.S.C. § 1806(f) To Discover Or Obtain Material Relating To Electronic Surveillance, Dkt. #53 at 5-6 and
n. 1 (addressing determination whether information was the product of a FISA warrant); and Plaintiffs’ Opposition To Defendants’ Third Motion To Dismiss Or, In the Alternative, For Summary Judgment, Dkt. #50 at 7-15. Pertinent argument is also set forth in plaintiffs’ Sealed Supplemental Brief Of Appellees filed in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in July of 2007.

1 the Court has reviewed the Sealed Document, the evidence submitted in connection with the first 2 amended complaint, and plaintiffs’ arguments on how the evidence demonstrates Article III
3 standing, the Court is sufficiently well-positioned to determine the existence of the facts essential 4 to standing, without any further submission of evidence or argument by either plaintiffs or 5 defendants.

6 If, in opposition to plaintiffs’ motion for partial summary judgment, defendants make any 7 attempt to submit further evidence, whether classified or unclassified, on the factual elements of 8 plaintiffs’ standing, plaintiffs propose that this Court prohibit defendants from doing so – as a 9 sanction “for failing to obey the court’s orders,” Dkt. #90 at 3 – pursuant to Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(ii) of 10 the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure (order “prohibiting the disobedient party . . . from introducing 11 designated matters in evidence”).

12 A district court may “sanction a defendant who refuses to respond to appropriate discovery 13 requests on a fact relevant to subject matter jurisdiction by entering an order establishing that fact 14 as true.” Gibson v. Chrysler Corporation, 261 F.3d 927, 948 (9th Cir. 2001); see Fed. R. Civ. P.
15 37(b)(2)(A)(i) (discovery sanction directing that “designated facts be taken as established”). This 16 sanction under Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(i) “rests on the reasonable assumption that the party resisting 17 discovery is doing so because the information sought is unfavorable to its interest. In such a case, 18 the sanction merely serves as a mechanism for establishing facts that are being improperly hidden 19 by the party resisting discovery.” Gibson, 261 F.3d at 948.

20 By parity of reasoning, because standing is a component of federal subject matter
21 jurisdiction, see, e.g., McCall v. Dretke, 390 F.3d 358, 361 (5th Cir. 2004), this Court can likewise 22 sanction defendants under Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(ii) by prohibiting them from introducing further 23 evidence regarding the fact of plaintiffs’ warrantless electronic surveillance within the meaning of 24 FISA. That sanction, as in Gibson, would rest on the reasonable assumption that defendants have 25 failed to obey this Court’s orders because plaintiffs were, in fact, subjected to warrantless 26 electronic surveillance within the meaning of FISA. The sanction would serve as a mechanism for

1 establishing that fact, which defendants improperly seek to hide. See Gibson, 261 F.3d at 948.<sup>3/</sup>

2 Plaintiffs believe that this second scenario, like the first, is both appropriate and feasible – 3 appropriate because the liability issues are purely legal and thus are amenable to adjudication by 4 partial summary judgment, and feasible because the existing record is sufficient to permit the 5 determination of Article III standing without a protective order and without plaintiffs having access 6 to the Sealed Document. Upon a finding forthwith that plaintiffs were subjected to warrantless
7 electronic surveillance within the meaning of FISA, this Court can finally get to the merits of this 8 litigation and decide the extraordinarily important issues the case presents concerning the scope 9 and limits of presidential power.

10 Indeed, plaintiffs believe that this second scenario is not just appropriate and feasible, but is 11 more appropriate and feasible than the first scenario. Litigation under the first scenario has the 12 potential for being protracted and contentious. The government has threatened to “withdraw” the 13 Sealed Document “from submission to the Court and use in this case,” Dkt. #77 at 3, which could 14 lead to a separation-of-powers clash between the Executive Branch and this Court. The 15 government has vowed yet again to attempt another interlocutory appeal to the Ninth Circuit
16 despite the absence of appellate jurisdiction – this time under the guise of 50 U.S.C. section 17 1806(h), see Dkt. #89 at 19-20 – if this Court adopts a protective order affording access to the 18 Sealed Document. And the government continues to insist that this Court lacks power to 19 determine that plaintiffs need access to the Sealed Document. See Dkt. #89 at 12, 16-17.

20 All of these complications – the threat to “withdraw” the Sealed Document, the vow to 21 attempt another interlocutory appeal, and the denial of this Court’s authority to determine the “need

23 <sup>3/</sup> Willfulness or bad faith supporting such a sanction, see Commodity Futures Trading Comm’n
24 v. Noble Metals Int’l, Inc., 67 F.3d 766, 771 (9th Cir. 1995), is certainly present here, given 25 defendants’ repeated and flagrant disregard of multiple court orders. The sanction is amply justified 26 by multiple factors, including the public’s interest in expeditious resolution of this litigation, the 27 Court’s need to manage its docket, and the public policy favoring disposition of cases on their merits.
28 Cf. Thompson v. Housing Authority of City of Los Angeles, 782 F.2d 829, 831 (9th Cir. 1986). And independent of Rule 37, the Court has inherent authority to impose this sanction. See Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 764-67 (1980); Primus Automotive Financial Servs., Inc. v.
Batarse, 115 F.3d 644, 648 (9th Cir. 1997); Dickason v. Potter, 2007 WL 161004 (N.D. Cal. 2007), aff’d, 2009 WL 1133308 (9th Cir. 2009).

1 to know” – will evaporate under the second scenario, because plaintiffs will not need access to the 2 Sealed Document for purposes of adjudicating standing and liability. The road to deciding this 3 case on the merits will become short and smooth: no more Executive Branch assaults on the 4 constitutional separation of powers, no more interlocutory detours to the Court of Appeals, no need 5 for a protective order, and no more of the Orwellian antics that have plagued this litigation since its 6 inception. Under the second scenario, the issue of access to the Sealed Document will be shelved, 7 and this Court can cut the immense Gordian Knot that defendants have made of this case and 8 finally get to the merits, simply and expeditiously.

9 Under the second scenario, plaintiffs are prepared to file their motion for summary 10 judgment by June 30, 2009.

11 CONCLUSION

12 The “order to show cause” portion of this Court’s order of May 22, 2009 enables the 13 Court’s pursuit of the third option that plaintiffs set forth in the Joint Submission of May 15, 2009 14 – a default judgment of liability – should the Court choose that option. Although plaintiffs would 15 be satisfied with a default judgment of liability, it is not their preference.

16 Plaintiffs and their counsel filed this action, and have pursued it for more than three years,
17 with a singular purpose – to obtain an adjudication of the legality of President George W. Bush’s
18 warrantless electronic surveillance program and, more broadly, the Bush Administration’s 19 expansive theories of presidential power. Plaintiffs’ second choice is a win by default that 20 establishes no legal precedent. Plaintiffs’ first choice is a binding decision on the merits. More 21 important than plaintiffs’ preference, however, is what the American people deserve: a decision by 22 this Court resolving the extraordinarily important issues presented in this case.

23 Finally, under either of the two scenarios addressed above, we request that the Court order
24 defendants, under Rule 37(b)(2)(C), to pay plaintiffs the reasonable expenses, including attorney’s 25 fees, caused by defendants’ failure to comply with this Court’s previous orders. See Fed. R. Civ. P.
26 37(b)(2)(C) (“the court must order the disobedient party, the attorney advising that party, or both to 27 pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney’s fees, caused by the failure, unless the failure was

1 substantially justified or other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust”); Lew v. Kona
2 Hosp., 754 F.2d 1420, 1426-27 (9th Cir. 1985).
